

Using Your Work Values to Explore Occupations

You can use your work values to explore careers. Work values are good to use because you probably will find that meet your work values will be more satisfying and rewarding for you than occupations that don't meet you.

Remember, though, that work values are just some of the information that you can use to explore careers. Other information about yourself:

- your abilities,
- your interests,
- experience,
- education, and
- motivation

The links for each Work Value will display a list of occupations that match that value. You can then use the occupation links to learn more about the occupation.

Recognition and Achievement

Follow the link above to display a list of occupations for which both of your top two values are important.

Recognition

Your Score : 26

People for whom recognition is important like to work in jobs which have opportunities for them to advance, their work, and direct and instruct others. They usually prefer jobs in which they are looked up to by others.

Achievement

Your Score : 24

People for whom achievement is important like to see the results of their work and to use their strongest abilities. They get a feeling of accomplishment from their work.

---

The remaining four work values are listed below. Even though they aren't your highest work values, you may want to look at their occupation lists. For work values that are somewhat important to you, you can find out which occupations you like. For work values that are not important to you, you can find out which occupations you might be less suited to.

Working Conditions

Your Score : 17

People for whom good working conditions are important like jobs offering steady employment and good pay. They prefer employment that fits their individual work style. They may prefer doing a variety of tasks, working alone, or working with others.

Relationships

Your Score : 16

People for whom relationships are important like to work in a friendly, non-competitive environment. They like to work with other people. They prefer jobs where they are not pressured to do things that go against their sense of right and wrong.

Support

Your Score : 16

People for whom support from their employer is important like to be treated fairly and have supervisors who up. They prefer jobs where they are trained well.

Independence

Your Score : 12

People for whom independence is important like to make decisions and try out ideas on their own. They prefer can plan their work with little supervision.